On Wednesday March 28th, 2012, a group of DHS students participated in a campaign to “Spread the Word To End the Word” on Yale University’s Campus. Spread the Word to End the Word is a national campaign, which was started at Yale, to eliminate the derogatory use of the r-word, 'retard or retarded' from everyday speech. This year DHS is joining the initiative, trying to spread awareness of the hurtful and dehumanizing effects of the word and to encourage people to think before they speak. Look for more information to come as DHS will hold our own “Spread the Word To End the Word” Event towards the end of the year.
